FARM BUREAU MEETING

try compared with those of the city, the former being together three times a day, while those of the city have the hustle and bustle of thousands of attractions that keep the family separated.

He paid the farmers a high tribute when he said they were a class who paid their bills and that bankers were beginning to find that they offered the best security in the world, no industry, can be compared to farming.
If he has Faith, Hope and Charity with all of these qualifications, whence the need of regeneration?

Mr. Sevey struck the key note of the abandoned farms when he said that those who had toiled and labored on them looked to the city and there saw men working less hours, and getting more pay, and he said why should I deprive my family of the attractions of the city life and keep them on the farm where they toil equally as hard as the man. He urged the raising of more and buying less, that the farmer made his greatest mistake when he decided that he could buy cheaper than he could raise.

The speaker very emphatically declared that there had been a hitch up around too much propaganda floating about, that Uncle Sam had spent millions telling the farmers to produce, produce, produce. What about the returns and distribution? This is not the farmer's way, his way is to produce what the market and market for, then produce some more.

The speaker said he had become greatly interested in the census report of crop yields. With all the millions that had been spent to help the farmers, in the past 40 years the per centage yield of wheat, corn and corn had not increased one bushel per acre. In his closing remarks he gave a strong appeal to the farmers to get into the Exchange and make it a live, active organization until they could hook up with a larger organization, that the consumer must hitch up with the producer and when this is brought about, just watch the bananas fall.

He endorsed the raising of the membership fee of the Farm Bureau and that no section of the states had as good an organization as that of New England. That the Farm Bureau was becoming a power which was having influence at Washington, because farmers were organizing and demanding these things. That the farmer was getting a better grasp of the situation and is a master of his own destiny. That the old saying "What's the use" was fast passing away, and that mental chemistry was going on, and that they now possessed courage which was one time lacking. He said that the farm bureau in their drive for membership soon to be launched must not only get members but must deliver the goods.
That when the organization was completed, work had just begun. That the Orleans County Exchange should not organize as competitor to another county exchange but to co-operate with them. That they should look beyond Orleans County, and beyond Vermont.

Mr. Sevey possesses a pleasing personality, and thoroughly convinced his audience that he was heart and soul in every movement that would as-ist and be beneficial to the farmer.
At the closing of his talk which was straight from the shoulder he was accorded a most hearty applause. This was Mr. Sevey's first visit to Orleans County, and he would receive a hearty welcome at any time that he should return again. Members of the exchange and farm bureau, many who were accompanied by their wives, to the number of 150 partook of a bountiful dinner which was served in the dining room of the Town hall by Black River Valley Grange.

The business session of the exchange was conducted at the forenoon session. The meeting was in charge of the president, J. H. Bartlett. Mr.
Bartlett in his opening remarks explained the condition of the Orleans county exchange at the present time and told some of the trying experiences that it had passed through the past year. That the directors who were anxious to help the members save some money on feeds, grain and fertilizers, but in order to accomplish this they had to gamble on the market which was a falling one, and the exchange suffered a loss of around $6000 in the disposing of their purchases. He said that a good part of the indebtedness had been take care of and arrangements for the payment of the balance had been satisfactorily made. Mr. Bartlett said that every exchange passed through the same experience only more serious. While it had been a trying experience yet their courage was still good, and with the support of its members they would succeed. C. W. Richmond, clerk and treasurer of the exchange gave the amount spent, and while it showed an indebtedness, it contained much of interest and real value.
There has been a gain the past year in membership, the total membership now being 598. H. W. Shaw manager of the exchange rendered a very interesting report, which covered the work of the past year. It showed that nearly $85,000 worth of feeds, grain and fertilizer business had been done.
If the exchange could have the entire business of the members it could accomplish greater good, and the sales would reach a half million mark. He said that while their price on seeds was over the market value on delivery, owing to the drop in price, yet the farmer should not forget that one year ago on a rising market the seeds were about $1200, more on arrival and were delivered to them at cost plus the small commission which meant a great saving of money. Others who gave short talks were C. W. Richmond who has taken a live interest in the exchange since its organization and urged its support by the members. In a county of 2600 farmers it should have more than 600 members. Fred May of Barton presented his views of some of the exchange troubles. W. T.
Abell of the Orleans county farm bureau presented the plans of the Bureau in its drive for membership which is to be launched July 25, for which prominent speakers had been engaged. The first meeting will be held at Greensboro continuing until every town had been reached, and each meeting will be followed up four days after by the canvass committee.
R. C. Aseltine of the circulation department of the New England Homestead was present and in his remarks said that the only trouble with any exchange was the fact that the business was that farmers failed to read the valuable information that they could have through the press. Frank J. Libby chairman of the board of auditors gave a verbal report and took active part in the discussion during the day. During the business session the By-Laws was offered by the clerk, which does not require members of the exchange to be members of the Farm Bureau, the amendment was unanimously adopted. Another amendment to the By-Laws which was also adopted, was to increase the number of directors from seven to nine, three to be elected for one year, three for two years and three for three years, and that a meeting of the directors must be held within ten days from the annual election at which an executive committee of five are to be chosen. The old By-Laws called for five directors elected annually. President Bartlett appointed the following as a nominating committee: F. J. Libby, Newport, chairman; Wm. Lawson, Coven-try; Fred May, Barton; F. E. Simpson, Glover; and J. H. Lanou, Irasburg. Upon their recommendation the following officers and directors were elected, C. W. Richmond of Newport, secretary and treasurer; auditors F.

J. Libby, Bruce Buchanan, and H. E.
Rollins. Directors for three years:
J. H. Bartlett, Orleans; A. M. Clough, Irassburg; C. W. Richmond, Newport.
For two years: C. M. Borland, West Glover; E. A. Dutton, East Crafts-bury and J. A. Griggs, North Troy.
For one year: E. S. Kelley, Orleans; B. W. Farmer, Island Pond; and David Spear, Greensboro.

The selection of president and vice president and the engaging of the manager is left in the hands of the directors and will be taken up at their first meeting which will be held in Newport, June 25th.

What Auntie Missed.
Julia was enthusiastic over a comedy she had seen at a moving picture theater, and proceeded in jumbled baby fashion to explain what she had seen. The thing that impressed her the most was a toe dancer with short dainty skirts. She said, "Oh, auntie, you should have seen the girl in full bloom."

Brides

Just to think that of all the friends a bride may have who bring her gifts, only those who choose Silver will perpetuate the memory of their friendship in a form that will be eagerly welcomed and treasured as an heirloom by two or more generations. It is a satisfaction to give silver. It is a

BIRD'S ROOFS

"Good Old Paroid"

From time to time people send us pictures of Paroid Roofs that are "old in the service." Above is an example --- the farm buildings of J. T. Macomber of Grand Isle. Some of this roof was laid in 1901; some in 1905.

Paroid Banishes Roofing Worries

When you roof with Bird's you can count that roof off your worry list for so long that you'll be quite willing to replace it with another Paroid Roof when renewal does become necessary.

Twenty year service with Bird's Paroid is not at all unusual; chances are you know of some Paroid Roofs in your locality that are "old enough to vote."

When you have a roof to lay, go to any of these Bird dealers near you --- and you can't go wrong.

Any of these dealers can sell you Bird's Roofs:
